Working on a City-Related Project?

If so, your employer may be required to pay you a living wage under local law.

- Bloomington law requires specific minimum pay levels for some employers entering into service contracts with the City valued at $10,000 or more, or receiving subsidies in excess of $25,000.
- The living wage requirement for 2010 for employees working on City-related projects, is the equivalent of $11.25 per hour including both wages and the value of any health care plan offered, regardless of the employee's participation in the plan.
- There are exclusions that apply to both covered employers and employees.

If you believe you are not receiving the required pay, contact the Contract Compliance Officer at 349-3429 or human.rights@bloomington.in.gov.
