Mail may be sent to Susan Gray, 4666 N. Robb's Lane, Bloomington, IN 47408.
However, this organization is not "bricks and mortar" and does not have an address.

ABLES (Autism/Asperger's Better Living Empowerment Society) is a social activity group for young adults (ages 16/18 and up) who have disabilities on the autism spectrum. This group does not "teach" social skills but provides social opportunities, meeting on the first Monday of each month at a local restaurant for supper and conversation. Other activities are arranged on an irregular basis; scheduling of activities is through e-mail. The group is facilitated by three adults with expertise in autism related issues. ABLES-TOO is for younger individuals (ages 10 and up). All functioning levels are welcome. This group meets on an irregular basis for activities, often on Saturday; scheduling of activities is through e-mail. The group is facilitated by three adults with expertise in autism.

Adapting Motor Vehicles for People with Disabilities

Web address: www.nhtsa.dot.gov/cars/rules/adaptive/brochure/brochure.html
This website features a brochure with information based on the experience of driver rehabilitation specialists and other professionals who work with individuals who require adaptive devices for motor vehicles. It is centered around a process —evaluating needs, selecting a vehicle, choosing a qualified dealer to modify the vehicle, being trained, maintaining the vehicle — that can help avoid mistakes when purchasing and modifying a vehicle with adaptive equipment. It also includes general information on cost savings, licensing requirements, and helpful organizations. Although the brochure focuses on drivers of modified vehicles, each section contains information for people who drive passengers with disabilities.

The ACA is a national nonprofit amputee consumer educational organization representing people who have experienced amputation or are born with limb differences. Includes individual amputees, amputee education and support groups for amputees, professionals, family members and friends of amputees, amputation or limb loss related agencies, and organizations. The ACA operates on the principle that education enables individuals who have lost limbs to participate knowledgeably in decisions about their own care, services and outcomes. To achieve their highest potential, people with limb loss must play the central role in decisions affecting their lives in order to fully embrace life and opportunities for self-fulfillment. ACA activity update reports are available via the ACA Website and inMotion magazine.

One of the objectives of the ACA is to develop accurate information about the U.S. population of amputees to best represent constituents to government, industry, and the world.

ASL Access promotes public access to a sign language - American Sign Language. The ASL Access Video Collection of over 200 American Sign Language (ASL) videos features heroes and their histories, ideas and ideals. ASL biographies, comedy, poetry, storytelling, sign lessons, classic literature translations, parenting videos, health programs, children's shows, and sophisticated, silent plays, are all found on local library shelves through the work of ASL Access, providing millions of people access to American Sign Language.

People all over the world are interested in American Sign Language. ASL Access has received countless requests for help in finding, evaluating, or bringing access to ASL. As over 90% of deaf children are born to families without experience in visual communication, these children are at risk of falling behind their peers in concept development, language skills, academic achievement, and social savvy. Delays in learning may lead to poor outcomes as these children move towards adulthood. In direct contrast, deaf children who grow up in family or educational environments with people who are fluent in a sign language often develop advanced academic skills, becoming successful citizens and taking leadership positions. The general community includes many people, hearing and deaf, who are interested in visual language and literature. Some deaf individuals prefer to access content information and literature primarily through sign language. People who are in contact with deaf signers often want to learn visual languages. ASL Access makes it easier for these family members, friends, classmates, co-workers and others to find American Sign Language video resources.

ALDA works collaboratively with other organizations around the world serving the needs of late-deafened people. Late-deafened usually means deafness that happened post-lingually, after the development of speech and language; people with late-deafness are usually unable to understand speech without visual aids such as speech-reading, sign language, and/or Computer Aided Real-time Transcription (CART); may have lost hearing suddenly or gradually as a result of inherited causes, accident, illness, medication, surgery, noise or other factors. Late-deafened adults also can share in the common experience of having been raised in the hearing world and having become deaf rather than having been born deaf.

ASA, a grassroots autism organization, exists to improve the lives of all affected by autism by increasing awareness about the day-to-day issues faced by people on the spectrum, advocating for appropriate services for individuals across the lifespan, and providing the latest information regarding treatment, education, research and advocacy. Autism is a complex developmental disability that typically appears during the first three years of life and affects a person's ability to communicate and interact. Autism is defined by a certain set of behaviors and is a "spectrum disorder" that affects individuals differently and to varying degrees. There is no known single cause for autism, but increased awareness and funding can help families today.

The mission of the Judge David L. Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law is to protect and advance the rights of adults and children who have mental disabilities. The Center helps people who have mental illnesses or developmental disabilities exercise their own choices and have access to resources that enable them to participate fully in their communities. Uses litigation, policy analysis, coalition-building, public information and technical support for local advocates in four areas of advocacy:

Advancing Community Membership: Enabling people with mental disabilities to participate equally with other members of the community - as residents and members of families, as part of the workforce and enjoying social, recreational, political, educational and cultural benefits of community life.

Promoting Self-Determination: People with mental disabilities have the right to be independent, free from coercion and invasion of privacy. This includes economic self-sufficiency, the ability to vote, and having a voice in treatment decisions and control over who has access to their treatment records.

Ending the Punishment of People with Mental Illnesses for the System's Failures: Jailing or forcing outpatient treatment on people with mental illnesses is a poor substitute for adequate mental health and supportive services. Families should not have to relinquish custody of children with emotional disorders in order to access treatment.

Preserving Rights: Recent judicial decisions and regulatory revisions threaten to erode important protections and entitlements for people with disabilities in the areas of housing, health care, education and civil rights. The Bazelon Center defends the rights won by people with mental disabilities in recent decades.

Free telephone services for deaf and hard-of-hearing:

- Place relay calls from your PC or mobile device from anywhere to anyone:

www.siprelay.com/place_call.aspx

- Relay Indiana: 800-743-3333

Because the Indiana Arts Commission receives and re-grants federal funds from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA), all IAC-funded applicants are subject to the provisions of Sections 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. However, all arts organizations and other arts providers should be familiar with the provisions of the ADA and providing access to programs, facilities and services for people with special needs.

The Indiana Arts Commission offers Employing Creativity Forum Session Summaries and arts and accessibility resources. The greatest barrier to accessibility is a person's attitude towards the process of making spaces and programs accessible. Often people tend to think of installing a ramp at an entrance as a hassle rather than an opportunity to extend a welcome to parents with strollers, staff loading in artwork or supplies, or someone with a broken foot. Everyone appreciates improved access!

E-mail: ncil@ncil.org
Web address: www.ncil.org/index.html

NCIL advances independent living and the rights of people with disabilities through consumer-driven advocacy. NCIL is the longest-running national cross-disability, grassroots organization run by and for people with disabilities. Founded in 1982, NCIL represents thousands of organizations and individuals including Centers for Independent Living (CIL), Statewide Independent Living Councils (SILC), individuals with disabilities, and other organizations that advocate for the human and civil rights of people with disabilities throughout the U.S.

An outcome of the national Disability Rights and Independent Living Movements, NCIL was founded to embody the values of disability culture and Independent Living philosophy, which emphasizes that people with disabilities are the best experts on their own needs, have crucial and valuable perspectives to contribute to society, and are deserving of equal opportunity to decide how to live, work, and take part in their communities. Since its inception, NCIL has carried out its mission by assisting member CILs and SILCs in building their capacity to promote social change, eliminate disability-based discrimination, and create opportunities for people with disabilities to participate in the legislative process to affect change. NCIL promotes a national advocacy agenda set by its membership and provides input and testimony on national disability policy. This vision of equality has not yet been fully realized. Many people with disabilities remain imprisoned in nursing homes and civil rights laws are undermined and devalued on an increasing basis.

Lekotek uses interactive play experiences and the learning that results to promote inclusion of children with special needs into family and community life. Lekotek recognizes that raising a child with special needs is a family affair that puts demands on parents, siblings, caregivers, and extended family members. Families learn fun, creative and healthy ways to play together and to include their children in family and community activities. Children borrow adapted and traditional toys, books and software from Lekotek toy lending libraries for use at home. Thirty-four Lekotek sites nationwide offer family play sessions, toy lending libraries, Compuplay family computer centers, and other innovative community-specific programming. With the focus on what the child with disabilities can do, and with attention to the needs of the entire family system that supports the child, Lekotek helps children with disabilities reach their full potential.

Established in 1974 by Cushing N. Dolbeare, The NLHC is dedicated solely to ending America's affordable housing crisis, believing that this is achievable and that the affordable housing crisis is a problem that Americans are capable of solving. While concerned about the housing circumstances of all low income people, it focuses on those with the most serious housing problems - the lowest income households.

Goal 1: Inform Public Opinion - The American people will have improved understanding of low income housing needs and solutions, how current federal policy impacts these needs, and how these needs directly affect them and their communities, and will increase their support for progressive low income housing policy and programs.

Goal 2: Increase Capacity of Low Income Housing Advocates - Low income housing advocates, including state housing and homeless coalitions, direct service providers, residents, and other low income people, will be better prepared to educate, will be more actively engaged in educating, and will be more skillful in holding accountable their members of Congress and state and local officials about low income housing problems and solutions and the effect of federal policy in general on the well-being of low income people.

Goal 3: Increase Federal Policy Makers' Knowledge - Federal policy makers will consider social justice issues, especially low income housing, to be a high priority on the federal policy agenda.

Goal 4: Preserve Existing Federally Assisted Housing and Resources - There will be no further loss of federally assisted affordable housing units or federal resources for affordable housing or access to housing by extremely low income people.

Goal 5: Expand Federal Investment In Low Income Housing - The federal government will increase its investment in housing in order to produce, rehabilitate, preserve, and/or subsidize at least 1,500,000 units of housing that are affordable and accessible to the lowest income households in the next ten years and move forward on assuring decent and affordable housing for all people in the United States.

Goal 6: Improve NLIHC Internal Operations - The NLIHC will continue to improve its infrastructure in support of goals one through five.
