

ImagineBloomington Workshop 9: Childs Elementary School (4/2/2012)

Survey General Comments

- Prepare for energy decent.
- Streamline items that local businesses need to know – possibly through Local First.
- Bus line to Ivy Tech.
- Bike route (safe one) across Hwy. 37 at both 2nd and 3rd Street exits.
- Reduce regulations for kids who want to be entrepreneurs (lemonade day)
- Very awesome idea, keep up the good work and enthusiasm!
- Bloomington is a friendly community.
- This is somewhat random and likely outside the “growth plan”, but the idea is to use the waste generated by the community to produce goods the community uses ala William McDonough and the book, Cradle to Cradle.
- I recently attended the Elm Heights Historic District Guidelines meeting (I am an Elm Heights resident, though outside the District) and the Jacobs property came up. I argued that combining lots to build a mega-mansion was not necessarily a problem only to Elm Heights, but to all residential/dense districts like RC (Residential Core), et. al. throughout Bloomington. Consider Maximum SF for primary structures in RC and other single family/detached districts.
