Whereas, the beginning of a new year and of a new administration is a good time to take stock of successes, failures and possible changes for the better, the Common Council of the City of Bloomington hereby resolves that active commissions and boards of the City of Bloomington by the first regular meeting of this Council in March 1972 present a written report of their goals and activities, together with an evaluation of their success in meeting the charges laid on them by the ordinances bringing them into existence and proposals for such changes, new appointments, repeals, dissolutions, deaths, happenstances and/or conditions which might be effected by this Common Council, which in the opinion of the commission might help them better serve the people of the City of Bloomington, and we further resolve that failure of a commission or Board to report shall be taken as evidence that the commission is inactive, useless or otherwise defective and ought to be repealed or reconstituted.
