AGENDA SUMMATION

There were no minutes for approval at this meeting.

APPROVAL OF MINUTES

Susan Sandberg read the following statement:

REPORTS:
COUNCILMEMBERS

On this first City Council meeting following the May 3rd primary, I'd like to congratulate council candidates who won their respective races and who will be appearing on the ballot for the general election in the fall. A few of our current council colleagues will be retiring at the end of this term, but most of us will have the opportunity of moving on to November when we face other challengers. We also offer congratulations to our colleague and City Clerk, Regina Moore, and the Honorable Mayor, Mark Krusan for their primary wins yesterday.

It is not an easy decision to run for public office as it impacts personal and professional lives, and so I offer thanks to every candidate who demonstrates their commitment to public service. It takes a fair amount of courage and confidence to throw one's hat into the ring. Once in office, it takes a certain thickening of the skin to be able to stand up to the pressures and stand for the core values that make Bloomington unique in the state of Indiana as a prosperous, generous and inclusive community. We appreciate everyone who campaigned in this issues-oriented primary election, including John Hamilton who was most energetic in his bid for the Office of Mayor and most gracious in his concession.

The process of winning and losing elections will invariably leave resentments, wounded feelings, great sadness in defeat, great joy in the winning – and that's the nature of the contested primary.

In the wake of these feelings, our most important task ahead is to face them, to come together to heal the wounds, to re-connect our common interests, and to make sure that the City of Bloomington is well-served in its most honorable traditions. Our task in the coming months and years is to make sure that government in Bloomington remains fair and transparent, and that the needs of our residents are well met.

As elected officials, we shoulder our responsibilities to serve the public with humility and due diligence. To that end, I urge all candidates moving forward to focus their debates on the issues and with respect to good governance and responsive constituent services.

Thanks to all of the dedicated and active citizens who came out to the polls to participate in this primary election, and again, my best wishes to all city candidates and incumbent colleagues who will be moving forward in their fall campaigns. As Council president, I conclude my remarks with a call for unity, civility and great respect for differing opinions in the coming term. Let's all work together to keep Bloomington a shining star in the State of Indiana.

Mike Satterfield said that Sandberg's words were well-spoken.

Tim Mayer congratulated all the high school and college graduates in the community, and wished them well.

Councilmember Comments (cont'd)

Brad Wisler noted that on May 14th the TedX Bloomington event would be held at the Buskirk-Chumley Theater. He said this would be a series of interesting speakers on a wide range of topics organized by the local community. He said the theme was ‘The Wisdom of Play’ and noted that Councilmember Volan would be giving one of the talks. He gave the website and urged folks to get a ticket.

Chris Sturbaum thanked Bill and Mary Beth Hansen and said he was glad the primary election was over and that the council could get back to work.

Bet Savich, Director of the City of Bloomington’s Volunteer Network, reported on the Be More Awards that were held on April 5th. She said the awards celebrated community volunteerism. She noted that the Community Foundation, one of the sponsors, provided $5000 that was awarded to the agencies of the winning volunteers. She said that 86 groups and individuals were nominated and listed the winners as:

MAYOR and CITY OFFICES

- Be More Awards

- Bloomington Symphony Orchestra -- Be More Collaborative Award (Group or Family)
- Pi Kappa Phi, IU Bloomington Chapter -- Be More Involved Award (College Student)
- Bobbi Boos -- Be More Sustainable Award (Animal/Environmental)

- VITAL Program Volunteers -- Be More Knowledgeable Award (Education and Literacy)
- Jim Beeson -- Be More Bloomington Award (General)
- City of Bloomington Black History Month Steering Committee -- Be More Bloomington (General)
- Henry Upper -- Be More Dedicated (Lifetime)

She added that photos, a slide show and taped clips are on the city’s website and that the entire video could be obtained from CATS.

Lynn Schwartzberg, Chair of the Bloomington Arts Commission, reported on the first round of grants awarded in 2011. She said that 19 grants were submitted and the following 11 received funding:

- Bloomington Arts Commission Grant Awardees

- Windfall Dancers – grant for voucher program for Middle Way House residents
- Tibetan Mongolian Cultural Center – the multidimensional. Exhibit Bloomington Katmandu from the Rice fields to the Cornfields
- TedX Bloomington – 15 scholarship tickets to event

- Bloomington Chamber Singers – Free open annual Handel’s Messiah sing
- Buskirk Chumley Management – Breaking Away, a Bloomington Celebration

Piedmont-Smith asked the total amount of the awards. Schwartzberg said that $7,500 was granted in April, and that the same amount would be awarded in October.

There were no reports from council committees at this meeting.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES

Daniel McMullin spoke about I-69 and the loss of individuals’ property and other problems involved in the creation of that highway.

PUBLIC INPUT

Doug Wissing, a Prospect Hill resident, talked about the Neighborhood Traffic Safety Program, calling it a misnomer. He said the proposals in the program deal only with one street, and not the neighborhood in terms of traffic safety. He said the program as is could negatively impact a neighborhood. He called for an inclusive neighborhood traffic calming program that would address entire area needs by an engaged citizen process. He said the Conservation District models of McDoel and Prospect Hill neighborhoods already use a neighborhood-wide collaborative program. He said that process of true community input and consensus building would be fair, legal and neighborly. He added that the current program has flaws which could be manipulated by special interests to the detriment of the entire neighborhood and city. He said that the current NTSP balloting process disenfranchises neighbors who are threatened with negative impact as only the neighbors who stand to benefit from the NTSP project are permitted to vote. He added that if not tightly monitored, the NTSP proposals could be used to divert traffic – creating other problems. He said this was a violation of the both the Program and Indiana Code. He said the NTSP process could create risks in emergency vehicle response time, and it needed to be honestly addressed.

Wissing said that a true and inclusive program could address the entire neighborhood's needs, not just one street. He said that Prospect Hill was a good place to implement such a model program and urged the council to consider this.

There were no appointments to boards or commissions at this meeting.

BOARD AND COMMISSION APPOINTMENTS
LEGISLATION FOR SECOND READING

There was no legislation for second reading or final action at this meeting.

It was moved and seconded that the following legislation be introduced and read by title and synopsis only. Clerk Moore read the legislation by title and synopsis.

LEGISLATION FOR FIRST READING

Appropriation Ordinance 11-02 To Specially Appropriate from the General Fund Expenditures Not Otherwise Appropriated (Appropriating Funds for the Creation of Graffiti Removal Pilot Program)

Appropriation Ordinance 11-02

Amy Purdue, a 30-year resident of Bloomington, said she had issues with the graffiti situation. She said she didn't know what the solution was because of private and public places that allow art pieces. She wanted to know if the pilot program was a no-tolerance program and how it would work with private properties.

PUBLIC INPUT

Sandberg invited Purdue to attend the committee meeting on this item.

David Nosko, Managing Director of the Community Justice and Mediation Center, briefly described the Center's services, and noted that the newspaper story comments brought him to the meeting as two graffiti offenders were referred to their program. He said that a graffiti artist had met with the Chamber of Commerce, business owners to explain the issue from his perspective. Nosko offered two packets of information to the council members on this issue and said that they had been part of discussion and mediation on this issue and would like to help.

It was moved and seconded to have a special session immediately before the regularly scheduled Committee of the Whole on May 11, 2011. It was explained that this was to hear legislation so that it could possibly be passed and implemented before a state mandated deadline.

COUNCIL SCHEDULE

The motion was adopted by a roll call vote of Ayes: 9, Nays: 0.

The agenda for the internal work session scheduled for May 6th was discussed and Council Attorney/Administrator Sherman said that it could be cancelled if there would not be sufficient attendance.

Sandberg asked the council members to indicate their attendance at the work session and four members said they would attend. No further action was needed on that issue.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:10 pm.

AGENDA SUMMATION

It was moved and seconded that Resolution 11-08 be introduced and read by title and synopsis. Clerk Moore read the legislation and synopsis, stating that there was no committee recommendation. It was moved and seconded that Resolution 11-08 be adopted.

LEGISLATION FOR SECOND READING

Doris Sims, Assistant Director of the Housing and Neighborhood Development Department, outlined the Resolution.

Resolution 11-08 To Approve an Enterprise Zone Investment Deduction (EZID) in the Thomson Tax Increment Financing (TIF) District - Re: Cook Pharmica, 1300 and 1400 South Patterson Drive

She said that the HAND department provided day to day administration for the Bloomington Urban Enterprise Association, a non-profit that implements programs within its boundaries. She outlined the areas within the Urban Enterprise Zone.

She explained that the BUEA received funding through two tax incentives, one the Enterprise Zone Investment Deduction (EZID) deductions and Loan Interest Credit -- used primarily by financial institutions. Any company that takes advantage of the EZID deduction or any financial institution that takes advantage of the Loan Interest Credit was required to pay to the BUEA a participation fee which was 20% of the tax savings that they receive for using one of the tax deductions.

She noted that EZID allowed a taxpayer making a qualified investment within the boundaries of the BUEA to take a deduction on the qualified deduction. She said that a qualified investment was the purchase of a building, the purchase of new manufacturing equipment or production equipment, the repair or rehab of existing buildings, onsite infrastructure improvements, the construction of a new building or costs associated with retooling existing equipment. She said EZID deduction allowed 100% deduction of the increased assessed value of any improvements made in any of those categories over a 10 year period of time. For the tax payer to receive this deduction they must file a C-EZ 2 form with the auditor's office by May 15th of each year.

She said the council had approved a similar resolution for Cook Pharmica the previous year when they were making similar improvements at the Patterson Drive site, and noted that this is another project at that site. She said the investment would be the renovation of an existing space to make room for new office space, new lab space and new manufacturing space with an additional 100 positions created and an annual payroll of $6M.

She explained that the development taking place in the Tax Increment Finance area required that the local body also approve any deductions that take place within the boundaries of the TIF, and this was located within the Thomson TIF.

Piedmont-Smith asked what the $41,000 of BUEA funds would be used for. Sims said the BUEA did school grant projects for children who reside within the zone: Fairview, Tri-North. She said computers and academic programs have been purchased for schools. She said they also offer scholarships for residents in the zone to attend Ivy Tech or online classes, along with economic development scholarships for residents who want to take classes to learn a trade. They also provide a downtown façade grant renovation and rehab loans for zone businesses.

Piedmont-Smith asked Sims the current balance of the TIF and what current projects were lined up for the TIF so that she could better understand the impact of the money that was not going to that fund. Sims said that the balance was $1.4 million. She said there were some projects lined up, but didn't have first-hand knowledge of them. She offered to get that information for the council.

Rollo asked about the timing of new hires. Jason Regar said they anticipate hiring an additional 100 employees by March or April of 2012. He also thanked the council for creating the special session to hear the resolution adding that there was a short window of time between when they get the draft real property assessment card and the May 15th filing requirement.

Sandberg asked about the nature of the jobs that would be created. Regar said they would be PhDs, chemists, engineers, biologists, IT, finance or HR jobs, operators, logistics, and production workers.

There was no public comment on this resolution.

Mayer thanked Cook for all their investments in the community. He added that their contribution to the BUEA was an important one, even though it was required by statute.

Piedmont-Smith thanked Cook Pharmica as a neighbor, and noted that a vacant space had been transformed and was now employing people in a thriving business.

Resolution 09-11 received a roll call vote of Ayes: 6, Nays: 0.

The meeting was adjourned at 7:47 pm.

AGENDA SUMMATION

The minutes of March 23, 2011 were approved by a voice vote.

APPROVAL OF MINUTES

Tim Mayer congratulated those who would be soon graduating from area high schools.

REPORTS:
COUNCILMEMBERS

There were no reports by any city offices at this meeting.

MAYOR and CITY OFFICES

Andy Ruff reported on the Metropolitan Planning Organization's Policy Committee meeting that took place on Friday, May 13, 2011. He noted the policy committee voted to approve the 2012-2015 Transportation Improvement Program without inclusion of the state project segment of I-69 which would run through the Bloomington/Monroe County Metropolitan Planning Organization area. He said the vote was 8-3, and that a case was made that the state did not have a plan to fund the majority of the project.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES

- MPO

He said the representative from (Indiana Department of Transportation) INDOT at the meeting acknowledged that there was $4.5 billion in backlogged projects that had been delayed for lack of funding, that there were 4000 structurally deficient bridges in the state, and an $850 million annual revenue shortage compared to need. He added that gas taxes, the proposed funding mechanism for the project, might decline or at best remain stable as gas prices fluctuate. He added that there was no convincing case for a way to fund this project, and that there was a possibility that the road would be built to adjoin SR 37 at Fullerton Pike and stop there. He said many policy committee members had concerns about that and felt it was not in the community interest or a responsible public policy decision to include it in the TIP. He added that public comment comprised about 89% of the 3.5 hour meeting.

He stated that what would happen next remained to be seen, and that the Kruzan administration would be working with INDOT and the Governor to figure out the best interest of everyone in moving forward.

Sandberg read the rules for public speaking at this meeting.

PUBLIC INPUT

Bruce Anderson read passages from the Indiana Constitution and said he had filed a suit against the council for limiting public comment and various other things. He used more than the allotted five minutes for public comment and was told he was out of order and asked to leave the podium.

Brad Wilhelm, Director of Rhino's Youth Center, took the opportunity to present Stephen Volan with an award for their First Annual Karaoke Superstar Competition. He said Volan's overwhelming win was in honor of the City Council. He noted that the trophy was a traveling trophy to be defended in the next competition.

It was moved and seconded that Paul Sturm and Martina Celerin be appointed to the Bloomington Arts Commission. The appointments were approved by a voice vote.

BOARD AND COMMISSION
APPOINTMENTS

It was moved and seconded that Appropriation Ordinance 11-02 be introduced and read by title and synopsis. Clerk Moore read the legislation and synopsis, giving the Committee Recommendation of Do Pass 3-0-4. It was moved and seconded that Appropriation Ordinance 11-02 be adopted.

Susie Johnson, Director of Public Works, noted that the appropriation would allow the city to try a program for graffiti eradication in the downtown this summer. She said two seasonal staff members would be hired and supplied with materials to do this job. She said that the program would work through the police department for reporting, and work with property owners to eradicate the graffiti.

Rollo noted his question in a previous discussion was from citizens who wanted to know why city resources should be used for this issue rather than have offenders to this public service work. He said he had been told that 'hold harmless' agreements, training and consistency issues might be problematic. He asked if that was a good summation, and Johnson said it was.

He asked about reporting back to the council regarding the program in six months to one year. Johnson agreed that it would be done.

Sturbaum asked if there was thought given to fee-based participation in the program. He noted that repairs might come from those fees. Johnson said that was not discussed. She said the hopes for this project was to hit the downtown immediately and quickly, working with property owners to get the markings cleaned up as quickly as possible without putting up a lot of hoops for folks to jump through. She said it was about getting the downtown cleaned up quickly and consistently and the team at City Hall was looking at a variety of options and that this could be something considered in the future. Sturbaum said that getting rid of the marks quickly was most effective. She said there would be a lot learned this summer from everyone involved.

Piedmont-Smith asked if it would be an option for a business owner to allow the city to treat the property without having to call for a second instance of graffiti. She noted that this would be better than having Sturbaum's idea of a buy-in option, which may exclude some properties from being treated. Johnson agreed.

Piedmont-Smith asked if there could be a more specific report-back date. Johnson said it could be done, and added that more often the topic is discussed in public meetings, on TV, the more graffiti gets done. She noted that the report could be written.

Satterfield asked if there were folks outside the city who were on the 'team.' She noted the team was city personnel, although there had been talks with property owners who had been vandalized. She said the team could be expanded in the future.

Wisler asked about the process for gaining permission from the property owner. Johnson noted the process was as follows. A report to the graffiti hotline, it would be logged into the police record; an officer would go out to investigate the area. She noted that the same time the record would be sent to Public Works and assigned to the graffiti team. She said that the team would check GIS, determine owner, and get a 'hold harmless' sign if the owner or an agent is not on site.

Wisler noted that swift work would be most effective, and asked what would happen if the owner could not be reached immediately. Johnson said that even if it took two weeks to contact the property owner, they would do that. She added that the agreement could be effective for the entire span of the summer pilot project.

LEGISLATION FOR SECOND READING

Appropriation Ordinance 11-02 To Specify Appropriate from the General Fund Expenditures Not Otherwise Appropriated (Appropriating Funds for the Creation of a Graffiti Removal Pilot Program)

Sturbaum asked if a business could sign a form in advance of any activity. Johnson said that they could, and a form could be faxed to them for a signature.

Wisler noted that some building owners have given permission for artists to paint their buildings, and he asked if she knew the location and owners of those buildings. She reiterated that permission would be needed by the property owner for any of the city graffiti removal to be done. She added that commissioned work was not vandalism. He asked if there would be time wasted in locating those buildings if a complaint was submitted for them, to which Johnson noted that that issue would not pose a problem to the program.

Rollo asked if art work would be affected by graffiti. Johnson said that the city would not have the ability to restore artwork.

A call for public comment brought Larry Jacobs from the Chamber of Commerce to the podium. He commented that the Chamber, Probation Department, business owners and city officials met with a graffiti artist last fall. Jacobs said the artist provided insight into the issue of graffiti. He said it was a problem with city and private property as well as business buildings. He said the Chamber would like to be involved and encouraged the consideration of this pilot program.

Volan noted that the program that brought him the award that evening from Rhino's Youth Center was the type of activity that focused and channeled the interests of young people away from expression at the expense of others to expression for the benefit of others. He said that he would support the appropriation ordinance, but wanted to also give some thought to programs that focus the interest of young people who might feel that their only means of expression is tagging (a stylized personal signature).

Rollo said he was willing to support this as a pilot program, and said it was a shared responsibility between the public and private property owners. He said he'd like to know if there are repeat offenses in the same places, or if there are continual new places vandalized. He said any statistics would be helpful in evaluation.

Sturbaum said it was a community problem and would require a community solution.

Wisler said he would support the pilot program and that its effectiveness wouldn't be shown until it is enacted. He said he would pay attention to tracking the times and how quickly information would flow, particularly with getting permissions. He urged not cutting corners in color matching as off color touchups might end up looking worse than the graffiti and might actually look like an inviting place to paint again. He said even the graffiti vandals could appreciate true art and gave the example of the Children's Mural on the B-line that used to be a spot for graffiti, but that had not been painted since the mural was put up. He said attention needed to make sure the removal was not shoddy.

Mayer said that this conversation had been taking place for a number of years with a number of groups and governmental departments. He said this was a viable solution and thanked Johnson for her efforts.

Sandberg noted the attention seeking element of graffiti saying that the more to-do and fuss that was made about this issue, the more the activity would be actually encouraged. She said motivations need to be considered and that the graffiti needs to be dealt with immediately.

She said talking to David Nosko, a case manager at the Community Mediation and Justice Center, was helpful in understanding the issue.
