I have owned 114 S. Grant since 1970. It was my law office with student rental on the second and third floor until 2008. In my ownership I have had the building completely restored, inside and out. It is an iconic downtown victorinal building, which presently houses The Venue Fine Art & Gifts, my son Gabriel's Art Gallery, and student housing on the second and third floors. This is my only rental property. It is 1/2 block south of the Library, across the alley from Soma. The exterior of the building is about 2/3rds stone and roofing, and 1/3 wood.

In the most recent inspection I was ask to repaint the building. While there was some paint blistereing on the cedar shake parts of the building, I considered appealing, because overall, in my judgment the building still looked good. But I decided to comply. My son Gabriel decided to take on the project, and has completed most of the lower parts of the building. (second Floor and below) He also completed about a third of the upper level when for him, the height became daunting.

At the beginning of this summer, I hired a local painting contractor, John McKlosky, to complete the upper levels. After several delays, starts and stops, John, without notice, abandoned the project. I have contacted several painting contractors to get bids to complete the work. Because of the time of year, several have said they are booked finishing off projects and therefore unavailable.

As of today, while not completed, my building does not look bad. It does not diminish the neighborhood, which is now and will continue to be one big costruction site with the hotel going up within a block, on Kirkwood. The quality and saftey for my tennants is unaffected.

While I will give this matter my best attention, my wife and I are retired and live on a fixed incomes, and on Friday, October 20th, in Indianapolis, I had emergency uriological surgery that in recovery requires that I remain sedintary and not drive for a least 10 days. If I can find an affordable and compitent paint contractor, the painting should be complete within 30 days. If I cannot find a contractor, or if weather becomes an issue, it may have to wait until spring.
