Frank Barnhart, attorney for the petitioner, apologized for rushing this through, but the bond market is changing quickly and they have buyers lined up for next week with construction to be started in the spring. This will be for Series A bonds, and they hope to come back soon for Series B.

City Attorney Bill Finch explained that they have only recently received some of the documents and he hasn't had a chance to go through all of them carefully, particularly the bond purchase agreement. He would be more comfortable waiting until later to make sure there are no problems with any of the documents, but as long as the petitioners agree that changes can be made to the ordinance if needed, he would see no problem with going ahead. The petitioners then agreed that changes could be made if the City Attorney thinks it necessary.
