

PREVENTION THROUGH EDUCATION

The Bloomington/Monroe County Human Rights Commission is dedicated to eliminating discriminatory practices. The people we wish to reach include landlords and tenants, employers and employees, owners and patrons of public accommodations, real estate agents, bankers and home buyers, teachers and students. The Commission sponsors educational forums and publishes pamphlets. Commissioners and staff members are available to speak at meetings or to individuals at no charge.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

The Bloomington/Monroe County Human Rights Commission enforces the Bloomington and Monroe County Human Rights Ordinances. The Commission consists of seven representatives of our community. Three of the members are appointed by the City of Bloomington Mayor, two by the City of Bloomington Common Council, and two by the Monroe County Commissioners. Commission members hold public meetings once a month. The Human Rights Commission has three primary responsibilities:

- preventing discrimination through education;
- investigating complaints; and
- devising solutions.

HATE INCIDENTS

The BMCHRC also collects data and issues reports on hate incidents. Hate incidents include verbal or physical abuse directed at individuals or groups because of their race, sex, color, disability, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, ancestry, religion, national origin, veteran status or housing status.

Bloomington/ Monroe County Human Rights Commission

The Bloomington/Monroe County Human Rights Ordinance promotes equal opportunity in employment, housing, education, and access to public accommodations, regardless of race, sex, religion, color, sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, ancestry, disability, veteran status or housing status. The ordinance also prohibits familial status discrimination in housing.

INVESTIGATING COMPLAINTS

Filing a Complaint and Investigation: If you believe that you have been discriminated against, you may file a complaint with the Bloomington/Monroe County Human Rights Commission. The complaint is a sworn, written statement that explains the basis of your belief. It charts the scope of the investigation. The BMCHRC will collect and summarize the facts and law related to your complaint, collecting the best evidence available for each side. You may be asked to supply documents or other information that supports your complaint. Most investigations are completed within four months.

Your lawyer is welcome to participate in the investigation, but you do not have to hire an attorney. Few complainants do. Sometimes, complaints are settled during the investigation period.

Probable Cause Determination: If there is no settlement after the investigation, the BMCHRC decides whether to proceed further with your complaint. If we believe that there are grounds to believe discrimination occurred, we will issue a finding of "probable cause." If we do not believe there are grounds to believe discrimination occurred, we will issue a finding of "no probable cause." If we find no probable cause, your complaint will be dismissed, unless you appeal.

Formal Conciliation: Upon finding probable cause, the BMCHRC sends a proposed consent agreement to the parties and invites them to settle. This proposal can be negotiated.

Public Hearing: If we find probable cause, and if the parties cannot agree on a settlement, the BMCHRC will hold a public hearing to decide your case. These are rare. After hearing all the evidence, the BMCHRC will issue an order in your case that is binding on the parties. Final orders of the BMCHRC may be reviewed by a court. In such cases, however, the court will not hold a trial. It will review the record of the BMCHRC's public hearing and consider legal arguments.

DEVISING SOLUTIONS

If the BMCHRC finds for the complainant, it will issue an order requiring changes to be made that will help eliminate discrimination in the future and that will help make the complainant whole. These changes may include reinstatement to a job, reimbursement for lost wages, making a house or apartment available, changes in policies, practices, training, or any other appropriate relief that will help meet the goals of the ordinance. The BMCHRC may award monetary damages where appropriate.

Complainants are protected in their right to file a complaint. It is unlawful to retaliate against a person because he or she has filed a complaint, acted as a witness, or assisted the BMCHRC in the investigation of a complaint.

Respondents are protected against unfounded charges. The BMCHRC realizes that some charges are in fact not based on unlawful discrimination, and it provides fair investigations and written determinations to weed out such charges. The BMCHRC must investigate each charge before deciding whether or not it is well-founded.

JURISDICTION

The Bloomington/Monroe County Human Rights Commission has jurisdiction within the entirety of Monroe County, with the exception of areas within Ellettsville and Stinesville town limits. Complaints may be filed with the BMCHRC only if the alleged discrimination occurred within Monroe County. For complaints outside of our jurisdiction, the BMCHRC will make an appropriate referral.

MEETINGS

Commission meetings are held usually at 5:00 p.m. on the third Monday of the month in the Showers Building, 401 N. Morton Street. The public is encouraged to attend.
